App description

The Master the Elements app makes it fun to learn the placement of all the elements in the Periodic Table.

In a easy and intuitive way users can try to master all three levels of difficulty in shortest amount of time.

Users can post scores and achievements on Facebook for everyone to admire and challenge the entire world in Game Center.

Speciality

A learning app with a gaming twist. With simple graphics and easy navigation the app fits all ages in three levels of difficulty.

The Student level acts like a training level introducing users to the Periodic Table. The Bachelor level tests users ability to memorize. And placing the elements on the Master level definitely requires knowledge about the Periodic Table.

With highscores and achievable trophies, users can challenge themselves and others via Apples Game Center and social media like Facebook.

Development:

Master the Elements is the first in a series of learning apps for tablets.

Future apps will challenge you in other genres, but still feature the same kind of crisp and pleasing interface, with the intention to be easy to use, but still challenging to master.

By adding gaming concepts such as timers, scores and trophies the apps are designed to inspire users to learn.

Technical:

The app series are developed in Objective-C and include use of Parse as data- and notification backend, using their Parse SDK, sharing and login with Facebook, using their Facebook SDK and finally the use of Apple Game Center, for highscore and trophy handling. Finally the app series support environment are created using HTML5/CSS3 RWD landing pages, Youtube videos, Facebook fanpages and Twitter announcements.
